

Loudoun Literacy Council Awarded $5,000 Grant from State Farm

Leesburg, Virginia -- Loudoun Literacy Council is excited to receive a $5,000 grant from State Farm Insurance. The funds will be used to support adult and family literacy programs in Loudoun County.

“We are thrilled and honored to receive funding from State Farm. Their support comes at a crucial time. Over the past year, the impact of COVID-19 has widened the education gap even further. We adjusted our approach at Loudoun Literacy Council and worked tirelessly to ensure that we continued to provide essential services to meet the literacy needs of our community. State Farm’s generous grant enables us to continue transforming lives with our programs and resources into the future.” Nikki Daruwala, Executive Director, Loudoun Literacy Council

“We are a proud supporter of the Loudoun Literacy Council and its commitment to changing lives and communities through literacy,” says State Farm spokesperson Evannah Johnson.

About Loudoun Literacy Council: Established in 1980, Loudoun Literacy Council teaches English communication skills and provides literacy resources to empower low-income adults and children. Loudoun Literacy Council believes that literacy remains essential to achieving community-wide aspirations of developing young learners, strengthening families, enabling parents to participate in the education of their children, and ensuring access to opportunities for economic advancement. Through Loudoun Literacy Council’s Family and Adult Literacy programs, participants work hard to gain the skills they need to take the most basic and meaningful steps toward achieving success and gaining skills to reach their personal and professional goals. Loudoun Literacy Council’s programs directly reach more than 2,440 residents annually and they have distributed nearly 16,000 books to children in the Loudoun community.
